DR. EASTON INSTALLED

The Popular Paster of the Eastern Presbyterian Church Formally in Charge.

Prominent Presbyterian Ministers Take Part-Dr. Hamlin's Sermon and Dr. Bartlett's Address

The services of formally installing Rev. Dr. Thomas Chalmers Easton as pastor of the Eastern Presbyterian Church, Stanton square, were held last evening at the church in the presence of the members of the congregation and friends and a number of the pastors of the Presbyterian churches of the city. Dr. Easton has been serving the church for some time as pastor, and the success which has rewarded his efforts has attracted general attention throughout the denomination in this city. The occasion, which marked the beginning of the official relations between pastor and people, was of more than usual interest. The presbytery of Washington city had taken action and had appointed those who were to take the eading part in the service. Rev. Dr. Bittenger was selected to preside, the prayer was offered by Rev. Charles B. Ramsdell, the sermon was delivered by Rev. Dr. Hamlin, the charge to the pastor by Rev. Dr. Bartlett, the charge to the people by Rev. Br. Chester and the prayer of installation by Rev. Dr. Sunderland. Rev. C. Alvan Smith read selections from the Scriptures, Rev. Dr. Patch offered prayer and the con-stitutional questions were offered by Rev. Dr. Bittenger.

A special program of music was rendered by the choir of the church, under the direc-tion of the leader, Mr. John Roeder. A solo was sung by Miss Dorothea Byrde Rogers. Dr. Hamlin's sermon was a strong Rogers. Dr. Hamilin's sermon was a strong and practical presentation of the theme of eternal life, which, he said, was not a matter for the future, but of the present. The meaning of the phrase eternal life, as used, the preacher said, was personal knowledge of God and acquaintance and fellowship with God. He spoke of human friendships and their influence on men. He dwelt on the educational effect of contact with men. the educational effect of contact with the educational effect of contact with men and with life, something which the most intimate knowledge of books would not give. The modern influence of the pulpit he at-tributed in some degree to the personality, to the life which was there. Men wanted the contact of men and mind, one with

The charge of Rev. Dr. Bartlett to the pastor was received by the newly installed pastor while standing in front of the pulpit. He frequently smiled and laughed, as did the congregation, at the bright comments and the humorous anecdotes which Dr. Bartlett is fond of introducing into his public addresses. He said at the outset that he did not know what he could say to a brother having the experience and the record of Dr. Easton. He intimated that he and Dr. Easton had entered upon the work of the ministry about the same time, and that therefore the latter's stock of experience was quite as abundant as that of the speaker. He, however, gave him some suggestions, which he thought would be especially suited to this city, where the speaker said the government was that of an absolute monarchy, and where every four years the process was gone through of turning the rascals out of the public offices and bringing into their places the white saints from the various ressional districts of the country to heritage, which was sometimes a blood-bought heritage.

He spoke of the debt which was on the church, and said that difficulties to be overcome sometimes spurred to greater activity and evolved a higher type. He told a story in illustration which related to the optimistic and pessimistic frogs which had unfortunately fallen into a milk can which the milkman, as it is said that milkmen are in the habit of doing, had left at the side of a spring. The pessimistic frog took in the situation and concluded that the hibit. Advocating Free Trade, the Single Tax and Co-Operation of Labor. Last evening a mass meeting was held This Important Decision Reached in a at Odd Fellows' Hall, 8th street southeast, under the auspices of the International Association of Machinists, the meeting being well attended and being addressed by Representative Jerry Simpson, Mr. Henry George and Grand Master James O'Connell of Richmond, Va.

Master Machinist Harry Speake presided over the meeting, and introduced the speakers, Mr. O'Connell being the first. The association, explained Mr. O'Connell, had its birth in Atlanta, Ga., with six members, and having now over 500 lodges in the United States, Canada and Mexico, and 40,000 members. Its purpose was to elevate the craft, to oppose convict contract labor, and to band the machinists of the country together in order to obtain fewer working hours and more pay. A reduction in the hours of toil in Pittsburg, with an increase in pay, was, he said, a result of organiza-tion, and urged the machinists in government employ to join the local lodge and aid in the work of the association.

Representative Simpson admitted there must be co-operation in all labor classes to accomplish any good, and while he was in accomplish any good, and while he was in hearty sympathy with organized labor, he rather inclined to unorganized labor. There were trades unions upon the earth before Christ was born, he stated; they have died and been born again and been born again, but have always been impotent to enable the laborer to derive the fruits of his toll. There must be somewhere a cure for the evil, and the question was to find out the robber who deprived the workman of his just dues. He believed the only cure was the emancipation of the land only cure was the emancipation of the land from monopoly.

Mr. Henry George advocated the single tax, saying that labor does not need any sort of protection, but only free play. He was glad to see men in Congress advocating free trade. It was the first light of a courageous start in the interest of labor. The truth is coming into American politics, and labor's hope is in the higher political economy that conceives its principles. The trouble with labor is that it has not seen clearly what to ask for. It has been declearly what to ask for. It has been de-luded by the effort to get a special advance and ignored the general welfare.

INDUSTRY AND DEVELOPMENT.

Theme of an Interesting Lecture by Mr. Carroll D. Wright.

Owing to the severity of the storm las evening there was comparatively a small attendance in the chapel of All Souls' Church to hear the lecture on "Modern Industry and Intellectual Development" by Mr. Carroll D. Wright, United States commissioner of labor, but those who did attend were well repaid for braving the Industry and intellectuality, he declared, advanced together; each man as his mind enlarged being fitted for more advanced work, and his place was filled by some one not so high in mental endowments, who in turn as he developed made way for another. The free system is much preferable to the old slave of feudal times, as tending to give the workman an interest in his work. As inventions increased men advanced mentally and morally, being brought more into association with each other. The period immediately following the inventions of Hargreaves and Arkwright was one of the greatest in the history of the world. The factory is the outgrowth of the tendency of man to join his labor to that of his fellow, the better to produce a desired end. The present factory system is much to be preferred to the old domestic one, both for the individual and for the state. Wherever the two exist and for the state. Wherever the two exist side by side the former is plainly seen to be the better. The social battles involve as great interest as those fought in the field, even if not so bloody. This is the age of intellect, brain and machinery, and the time that must be spent in labor to earn a living is becoming shorter. The condition of even the progress and most ignorant.

The Chinese must not go! The question of whether they should o should not do so was decided here last even ing, where so momentous a national ques tion should be decided, and, notwithstanding the fact that the question had perplexed and troubled the minds of the greatest statesmen of this country for many years, with the matter still unsettled, six young men, representing, respectively, the law schools of the Columbian and Georgetown Chinese immigration should not be prohibited. The occasion was the first of the se ries of debates between the debating societies of the law schools of the two universities, and despite the very inclement weather the lecture hall of Columbian Uni versity was well filled.

The debaters were Messrs. Bernard H. Taylor, Albert V. Taylor and Edgar C. Molby of Columbian and Messrs. John J. Dolan, P. J. Carlon and P. H. O'Donnell of Georgetown.

Mr. Thos. Gresham, president of the debating society of Columbian University law school, presided, and the judges of the debate were Mr. Justice Shepard of the District Court of Appeals, Mr. Wm. Lochren, commissioner of pensions, and Prof. Walter F. Rogers. The subject for debate was, "Resolved, That Chinese Immigration Should Be Prohibited," and the affirmative had been assigned to the Columbian debaters, while the negative was upheld by those from Georgetown. those from Georgetown.

The presiding officer, Mr. Gresham, opened the exercises of the evening by briefly welcoming the audience on behalf of the two societies. He referred to the presence of so many of the fair sex with the remark that they would furnish inspiration to those who were to contend for the mastery in the debate which was to follow.

He then introduced Mr. Bernard H. Taylor of Columbian, the first speaker on the affirmative. Mr. Taylor divided the subject of immigration into two parts, namely, the of immigration into two parts, namely, the power which the government had to prohibit it if it desired, and the power of the government to apply this prohibitory power to the Chinese in particular. He quoted from a decision of the Supreme Court to sustain this position, and then proceeded to show why this prohibitory power should be exercised in the case of the Chinese. He said that one of the prime laws of pature. said that one of the prime laws of nature was self-preservation, and contended that we must, if we would preserve our institutions, keep them free from contaminating influences. It is only the lower class of the Chinese people who immigrate to this country and these people do not assimilate and become part of our people, but simply come to secure a fortune and then return to their own land. He said that good immigrants were always welcome, but when those came whose presence was included to come own. whose presence was inimical to our own welfare, they should be, by law, excluded. On the Other Side.

At the conclusion of Mr. Taylor's argument, the presiding officer introduced Mr. John J. Dolan, president of the Debating Society of the Georgetown University Law School. Mr. Dolan, in a most effective speech, proceeded to combat the proposi tion on the ground that it was an unjust discrimination. The Chinese were a quiet peaceful, industrious and honest ple, and he saw no reason why they should be singled out as the object of prejudice to such a marked degree as to attempt their absolute exclusion from our midst. No anarchists or cranks were to be found among their number, and he thought that the ends of justice demanded that no discrimination should be made to the detriment of such a people.

Mr. Albert V. Taylor, the second speaker on the affirmative, called attention to the fact that the habits of the Chinese were fact that the habits of the Chinese were could work for less than the that the latter was thrown out of employ-ment whenever the two came into open competition. He further argued that the present condition of industrial depression called for limitations on the increase of the number of workingmen, and that it would be soon enough, when better times returned, to talk of increasing our already large army of workingmen.

Mr. P. J. Carlon next spoke on the negative. He reviewed the history of the great nations of the world, and showed that their prosperity was coextensive with the justice which characterized their national acts which characterized their national acts Justice and benevolence alone could preserve peace and harmony with other nations and inspire our own countrymen with noble and patriotic sentiments. He held that the Mongolian was the object of sense less prejudice, and it was this feeling that animated those who opposed his peaceful enjoyment of the advantages of our land.

The "Star" Says

in speaking of imitation butter:

"But society has a distipct grievance against the unscrupious men who deceive the unwary and often the most suspicious and acute by counterfeiting articles of standard food and offering their imitations as original. Such conduct should be more than frowned upon.

"There is no excuse for the deception so universally practiced.

can people like to be humbugged" seems, in some measure, true.

It is humbug to charge higher prices than necessary. High-priced dentists are hotest enough-probably they don't mean to humbug, but they do, and it costs just the same as if they meant it. meant it.

Their fault lies in standing still while the rest of the world moves.

Improvement of system, of tools, of appliances, has made "scientific destistry at moderate prices" possible.
